Commentary

This book contains descriptions of politics in the eyes of the author. The author considers the political upheavals in Malaysia are good. All that happens is preparing for the 13th general election. Agitation is great, and it is need for maturity. A description of someone's politics that being objective will be heading goodness. But there are also political description that is political nature, namely the description itself is significant of political will. Political description that has incitement will cause the country in disarray.

Every good aspects have a not a good idea, if we are wrong to use it. In politics, organized to overthrow the government by violent is not good. People have the opportunity to determine the government through the ballot box, so violence is not necessary at all. For the general election, all citizens can relax. Sobriety is a sign of maturity. Malaysia is not equal to any country in the Middle East who is desperate for change through opposition to the death. Freedom campaign is in Malaysia. Parties felt freedom was limited actually wants to find new reality. Some of them want the incremental gain freedom. In fact, freedom is something relative. There is no absolute freedom, and hinders greatly shapes, and a variety of reasons [1].

The author compares, the rich have the opportunity in too many things, while the poor have limited opportunities. In education, children of the rich have the opportunity to get a lot and expensive reading materials. Children of poor people only read text books prescribed by the school. But there are also children of the poor who excel. There is also a rich kid who is weak in the pursuit of knowledge. This proves that the opportunity should be obtained with high spirit and intelligence. The son shall endeavor, rather than relying on his father's wealth. Children of poor people should know that the only correct reading, despite the lack or absence of additional book-will determine success. In Malaysia, within twenty, or thirty years, the children of the poor will not end up being poor. If we read the history of a number of corporate members, administrators and others, which have a high income, we find some of them are the children of the poor.

The Malaysian government is currently very sensitive to criticism, and the opposition is very hard-working to get the aspects to be criticized. This is especially good for people. That is, people get good results because the government and the opposition play their role. The atmosphere is expected to remain after the election. As a country that practices democracy, the existence of the two sides, the government and the opposition is required. Only problem arises when the campaign and incitement grown in. The author recommends that people try to make Malaysia a democratic country optimally. For that, they must respect democracy there, and carry it out in a good, orderly and peaceful. Whoever they choose to keep Malaysia, should they receive it well.

Democracy system requires citizens abide by the decision public. Therefore, the political party is building a perception. The public perception has also been available. After the election, whoever wins should be celebrated. Suspicions that there is fraud is as serious as the true fraud. The author is confident that Malaysians will be good voters. They will be voting informative, discipline and abide by the decision. Meaning an informed voter is a voter who is not affected by the current developments that is not correct. At the moment too many things invented. All that happened half a century ago untold back by interested persons. The new story denying struggle nationalists who won Malaya's independence and encouraging those who failed to do so.

Disciplined voters are voters who realize that he has only one vote. He maintains the limited voting powers. He not busy if his voice was drowned, because that would win an election candidate is authorized amount. If he was in a group whose numbers are small, he would take it well. If he were in a large group, so he receives a victory with gratitude. Voters who abide by the decision are an extension to the disciplined voters. This type of voters will not be swayed by the opposition after a decision is made. That is, the decision of the people to elect a leader is for a period of five years. If that is understood, then the trouble during the campaign period does not apply. In the present time, there is a prolonged agitation, and people's lives have been disrupted because so disruptive of sedition. If the people as voters opted for informative, discipline and abide by the decision of the public, then the whole politics of Malaysia really nice.
